QUOTES

September 2018

Next meeting

*December 6, 2018 @ 6:30 pm
St Thomas Episcopal Church
Springdale*

Greetings All!!

Hope this finds everyone gearing up for the holidays! Halloween is past and now it's on to Turkey Day and then Christmas and New Year's! Under a Winter Advisory for tomorrow and hoping it doesn't get too bad. It's one of those things where we wait and see. The time

A Message from Our President

changed last weekend, and while I should be used to it, I'm not yet.

Does everyone have plans for Thanksgiving? The gathering of family and friends is an important part of our life. I did a trunk show in Muskogee last week and was great seeing some of the ladies that were there when I started quilting.

I need to get busy and start getting my Christmas things made but I'll probably put it off till the last minute like I usually do. Maybe the New Year's resolution will be not to procrastinate and get things done. I hope everyone has a wonderful Thanksgiving surrounded by family and friends

David

SUNSHINE & SHADOWS Joe Ann Reaves

*Donna urray's husband, Jim, recently underwent surgery and is recovering nicely.

*Roxanne Birchard's mother suffered a massive stroke and passed away. Her mother is from Cheyenne, WY. Please keep Roxanne and her family in your thoughts and prayers.

*Lila Rostenberg got an unexpected birthday surprise, the knowledge that she has breast cancer! It is a treatable and curable cancer. One day at a time, this is her new project and it is going well! Lila appreciates all the skilled and helpful people who have just come into her life...(maybe more of them will "need" a quilt?) Thoughts and prayers, smiles and hugs are appreciated too!

*Here's a special note from Lori Jones with both a shadow and a sunshine.
Jeff is doing very well with his treatments.
We have one more hospital admission for chemo (4 days) here, but should get dismissed on Thanksgiving Day. We'll then head down to MD Anderson in Houston for a pretty intense chemo and stem cell harvest, followed by more intense chemo and stem cell transplant. Basically he's getting washed, filtered, and his oil exchanged!

We will need to be down there the best of 3 months. We found a nice apt to rent, and now I need to decide which machine to take:). If I call it a quilt retreat the time will pass much faster!

I'd like to thank everyone who made quilt blocks for Jeff's cancer quilt. I'm anxious to start assembly and see where that goes. He's been very touched by all the cards and calls from old friends (and some he doesn't even know!)

The further we get into this process the more the shadow is turning into sunshine. Thank You all for being there for me, especially with your prayers. They mean everything! Here's a little sunshine for you too - our daughter here is pregnant with sweet #16, a granddaughter for us due in late March! That's motivation!

Thank You All Again! Lori Jones

*If you have a Sunshine or Shadow please let me know so we can send a card as well as let your quilting friends know. Joe Ann

October Guest Speaker: Michelle Wilkie

Originally from New Zealand, Michelle has been a quilter since 2012. Her passion is to design a quilt, then turn it into reality.

Her first quilt won a prize at a design competition. The center was paper pieced. Back was also pieced.

2. 1st prize in 2015. The challenge was low volume versus high contrast. She did needle-turned embroidery, and block matched the binding. Match stick quilting takes forever!
3. First prize at the State Fair, this is needle turned embroidery. The design is based on manicured gardens in Germany from prints and solids.
4. Modern traditional. Her son was studying fractions, and had to make a drawing on a graph. He drew this square to illustrate what he had learned. Then he wanted a quilt made of it. But the small one she made wasn't enough; he wanted a big one! She did straight line quilting in each block, but made the lines continue into the border on one triangle to break the "block" look.

5. Design for this quilt comes from wrought iron street lamps in Manheim, Germany. She got the triangle pattern from them. The back seems to be piano keys. She designed it to illustrate the negative image of a cross walk. Pieced back.

6. Abstract designs. Someone wanted alpine designs, so she made 3 pillow cases.

7. Designed from the tram stop in San Francisco. Named it San Francisco Bustle. →

8. During her sixty-hour work week, she spent an hour or two per day after work just sewing. These blocks are improvisational design about her feelings. The black and white show how she felt on Mother's Day after learning about her mother's cancer. The back is made with reversed colors.

9. Another improvisation design, hand pieced. Since it is so busy, the blue gives the eye a place to rest.

Michelle does a design in her journal once a week. She made the last design of the freshly painted lines on an interstate.

One was from an airplane wing. She sees a quilt in everything!

Document every quilt you make in a scrap book. Include for each project:

- Fabric swatches
- Inspiration, notes on the quilting, ideas
- What you were thinking of
- Did you enter it in shows?
- Who did you give it to?

Designing your own quilt requires thinking backwards. When you use your own designs, you know to add seam allowances to the pattern.

I change my needle when the machine begins skipping, and before I start quilting.

Once she had 3 weeks off after a procedure. She started looking around and saw quilt blocks. One became "Apple Tree & Dandelions."

Super Saturday Sew In

The Super Saturday Sew In on Saturday, November 17th to make the “Five and Dime” quilt looks promising. This will be the last one for this year. (See details in Guild Meeting Minutes! Page 5)

The ruler we are going to be using in the Super Saturday class on November 17th is:

Five and Dime Ruler from Kansas Troubles at ktquilts.com

Members enjoyed the September Saturday Sew In that Natalie McCrory organized. It unlocked some lovely creative combinations!
